INCAE & Ave Maria University renewed Cooperation Agreement for the benefit of AMULAC student
20 September 2000

Managua, Nicaragua
September 29th, 2000

INCAE Business School and Ave Maria University - Latin American Campus (AMULAC) renewed a cooperation agreement between these two universities, that share the objective of promoting activities which have direct impact in the educational task that both institutions carry out and the execution of academic, didactic, training, diffusion of culture and extension of services in all areas of mutual interest of their objectives and functions, towards the accomplishment of their goals and to the rational management of their resources.

I am so happy to renew this agreement with INCAE. 26 alumni have attended the MBA program at INCAE; they have done very well academically. The opportunity of studying a Master program at INCAE is a great advantage for our alumni. As you may know, 70% of our students are enrolled in the Administration School” commented Mr. Harvey Leach, Provost of Ave Maria University.

The signing of the contract took place on September 29th at the INCAE Nicaraguan Campus, Francisco de Soto, at 11 a.m. During the activity, it counted with the participation of Arturo Gandio, Rector of INCAE, Mr. Harvey Leach, Provost of Ave Maria University, Mr. Douglas Armenta, Director of the Language Institute of Ave Maria University (AMU1), among other invitees.

INCAE is a private, non-profitable and multinational institution of higher education, dedicated to teaching and research. The approach of work is based on the promotion of sustainable development and competitiveness. Among the many objectives of INCAE, they seek to secure the economic, social, and environmental development of countries that it serves, forming leaders that promote the sustainable development of Latin America.

Ave Maria University-Latin American Campus (AMULAC) is a Catholic institution of higher education established with the purpose of encouraging the Christian Testimony in the spirit of the Vatican II, and education according to the principles and norms stipulated by John Paul II in the Apostolic Constitution Ex Corde Ecclesiae.

Return to News

http://amulac.aveMaria.edu/news/6.html
INCAE Business School and Ave Maria University - Latin American Campus (AMULAC) renewed a cooperation agreement between these two universities, that share the objective of promoting activities which have direct impact in the educational field that both institutions carry out and the execution of academic, didactic, training, diffusion of culture and extension of services in all areas of mutual interest of their objectives and functions, towards the accomplishment of their goals and to the rational management of their resources.
“I am so happy to renew this agreement with INCAE. 26 alumni have attended the MBA program at INCAE they have done well academically. The opportunity of studying a Master program at INCAE is a great advantage for our alumni. As you may know, 70% of our students are enrolled in the Administration School” commented Mr. Harvey Leach, Provost of Ave Maria University.

The signing of the contract took place on September 29th at the INCAE Nicaraguan Campus, Francisco de Sola, at 11 a.m. During the activity, it counted with the participation of Arturo Condo, Rector of INCAE, Mr. Harvey Leach, Provost of Ave Maria University, Mr. Douglas Arroliga, Director of the Language Institute of Ave Maria University (AMLI), among other invitees.

INCAE is a private, non-profitable and multinational institution of higher education, dedicated to teaching and research. The approach of work is based on the promotion of sustainable development and competitiveness. Among the many objectives of INCAE, they seek to procure the economic, social, and environmental development of countries that it serves, forming leaders that promote the sustainable development of Latin America.

Ave Maria University-Latin American Campus (AMULAC) is a Catholic institution of higher education established with the purpose of encouraging the Christian Testimony in the spirit of the Vatican II, and education according to the principles and norms stipulated by John Paul II in the Apostolic Constitution Ex Corde Ecclesiae.

Return to News

http://amulac.avemaria.edu/news/6.html